

June 29

World Scleroderma Day

Paul Klee, Kettledrummer 1940, 270 (coloured paste on paper on cardboard), 34.6 x 21.2 cm,
Zentrum Paul Klee, Bern, DACS 2008

The great Swiss artist Paul Klee died in 1940 of scleroderma, which strongly influenced his creative art. Scleroderma is the name given to a group of rare conditions that can damage the skin, blood vessels, and internal organs. It has varied symptoms but early diagnosis and treatment can prevent the worst complications.

For more information about Scleroderma go to www.sclerodermaaustralia.com.au